

From the Desk of Your Client
By Katelyn Albertson

At the end of the tunnel I see a light,
A future for myself that is inspiring and bright.

Through the tunnel I will travel to pursue a future that is mine,
I know that I won't travel alone and that it will take some time.

As I look at my bright future I can see the path ahead,
But as I face this expedition I fear there are things that I will dread.

Wondering if I'm good enough and when the journey will end,
It is hard to see the light clearly when I don't know what's up ahead.

When I need someone to remind me of why I started in the first place,
I know that I will be reminded of all the obstacles that I have faced.

And as I remember how far I've come I then will be more mindful,
Of all the courage it took for me to pursue a journey that seemed frightful.

Then after working to overcome all of the things that made me feel small,
I will come to a light that fills me with amazement and awe.

As I reach the end of the tunnel and the long exploration comes to an end,
I'll find myself admiring all the places I have been.

The bright and inspiring future that's mine is finally here,
It just took some time and perseverance to overcome my fear.
